BRUNELLO DI MONTALCINO

CUPIO - BRUNELLO DI MONTALCINO DOCG

2017

- ◆ James Suckling 91 points
A ripe and straightforward Brunello with cherry, plum and cedar character and slightly chewy tannins. A layered and rather boxy mouthfeel. Needs two or three years to come around and open. Try after 2022.
- ◆ Intravino – (Andrea Gori) 92 points
Lamponi, e confettura di mirtilli, sorso di bella succulenza e aromaticità diffusa.
- ◆ Jancis Robinson 15,5 points

Elegant and refined nose, classy aromas of orange peel, dark chocolate, cinnamon, tobacco and black truffles. Pure, with rich rounded tannins and a dense palate with a spicy finish.

◆ Wine Advocate - Robert Parker 93 points

The accessible (and well-priced) Cupio is quickly developing its own brand recognition within the greater Pinino portfolio. The 2015 Brunello di Montalcino Cupio opens to a pretty bouquet with licorice and aniseed that gives lift and buoyancy to wild berry and crushed flowers. The fruit from this warm and sunny vintage is presented with good intensity and harmony, ceding to elegant tannins and fresh acidity. This risotto-friendly Brunello offers tangy, balsam and herbal sensations on the finish.

◆ James Suckling 93 points

Very floral with iodine, cherry, dried-earth and cured-cedar aromas and flavors. Full-bodied, tight and chewy with very fine tannins texture and flavorful finish. Shows intensity and focus.

2014

◆ Jancis Robinson 16 points

Maturing mid ruby with bricky tinges. Subdued, spicy and earthy and a little savoury and wild. Juicy, elegant and subtle. Perhaps too subtle for those who seek for more structure

◆ Wine Advocate-Robert Parker 90 points

From the folks at Pinino, this wine offers a more accessible and food-friendly overall approach. The 2014 Brunello di Montalcino Cupio offers bright fruit tones of dried raspberry and cherry, all backed by mild spice and grilled herb. The wine is subdued in terms of intensity, and the mouthfeel is rather short and compact.

◆ James Suckling 88 points

Plum and cherry character on the nose and palate. Medium body, light and delicate on the finish. Drink now

BRUNELLO DI MONTALCINO

- ◆ Vinous – Antonio Galloni 91+ points
Bright red. Aromas and flavors of red cherry, cedar, minerals and violet. Steely and austere in the middle and on the finish, with a tannic mouthfeel and a woody underbrush nuance on the long, vibrant finish. Though I think this could have used bit more fruit for a higher score, I find greater density of fruit in this wine than in the other two offerings from Pinino this year. (Ian D'Agata)

- ◆ James Suckling 90 points
Aromas of flowers, cherries and citrus follow through to medium body with firm and silky tannins. A fresh and clean finish. A leaner style but shows energy and focus. Drink or hold.
